Acknowledgements

The instructional module was developed for the Aspen Institute by the Matsunaga Institute for Peace and Conflict Resolution at the University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa. The Matsunaga Institute extends our appreciation to Margit Messner, a graduate student in the Certificate Program for Conflict Resolution and participant in the first U.S.-Vietnam Dialogue Group simulation, who developed the framework and assisted with the research for the module; and James Kim, Student Assistant in the Public Policy Center at the University of Hawai‘i, for formatting and reviewing the module’s content. Shaady Selehi and Phuong Quach from Active Voice provided a great deal of support and patience, for which we are grateful.

We especially thank Charles Bailey for sharing his passion for humanitarian concerns related to the legacy of Agent Orange/Dioxin with students and faculty at the University of Hawai‘i, and for inviting the Matsunaga Institute to develop this module. We sincerely hope that through the module we can promote further engagement on the subject of this devastating legacy and an understanding of the power of citizen-to-citizen dialogue.

Anne Marie Smoke
Module Project Coordinator
Program Manager/Education Specialist
Matsunaga Institute for Peace and Conflict Resolution

[Image: Spark M. Matsunaga Institute for Peace & Conflict Resolution]
http://www.peaceinstitute.hawaii.edu/

The Spark M. Matsunaga Institute for Peace and Conflict Resolution was established in 1985 to fulfill the vision of Senator Spark M. Matsunaga to expose every student enrolled in Hawaii’s public university to peace studies so they could learn and practice peaceful methods of resolving disputes of all kinds from interpersonal to global. The Institute, now called the Matsunaga Institute for Peace and Conflict Resolution (MIPCR), is part of the College of Social Science’s Public Policy Center and combines peace studies research with skills-based training for practical application of alternative dispute resolution methods in its three academic programs: the Certificate in Peace Studies, the Interdisciplinary B.A. in Peace and Conflict Studies, and the Graduate Certificate in Conflict Resolution.

[Image: The Aspen Institute]
http://www.aspeninstitute.org/policy-work/agent-orange

The Aspen Institute mission is twofold: to foster values-based leadership, encouraging individuals to reflect on the ideals and ideas that define a good society, and to provide a neutral and balanced venue for discussing and acting on critical issues. The four ways this mission is carried out are: 1) seminars, which help participants reflect on what they think makes a good society, thereby deepening knowledge, broadening perspectives and enhancing their capacity to solve the problems leaders face; 2) young-leader fellowships around the globe, which bring a selected class of proven leaders together for an intense multi-year program and commitment. The fellows become better leaders and apply their skills to significant challenges. 3) policy programs, which serve as nonpartisan forums for analysis, consensus building, and problem solving on a wide variety of issues; and 4) public conferences and events, which provide a commons for people to share ideas. The Institute is based in Washington, DC, Aspen, Colorado, and on the Wye River on Maryland’s Eastern Shore and has an international network of partners.
http://makeagentorangepurpose.org/

Make Agent Orange History seeks to raise awareness about this problem, highlight the solutions and connect people with ways to get involved.

http://www.activevoice.net/

Active Voice uses film, television and multimedia to spark social change from grassroots to grass tops. Our team of strategic communications specialists works with mediamakers, funders, advocates and thought leaders to put a human face on the issues of our times. We frame and beta-test key messages, develop national and local partnerships, plan and execute high profile, outcome-oriented events, repurpose digital content for web and viral distribution, produce ancillary and educational resources, and consult with industry and sector leaders. Since our inception in 2001, Active Voice has built a diverse portfolio of story-based campaigns focusing on issues including immigration, criminal justice, healthcare and sustainability.